

Sarah Ward-Brown

Sarah has been teaching children and adults in private studios, public schools, assisted living facilities and various community settings for the past twenty years. She is passionate about sharing her love of dance with students and encouraging them to find their own creative voice.

In addition, Sarah loves community engagement work, removing barriers and making dance more accessible to all. She has directed the Education and Community Engagement department with Oregon Ballet Theatre and continues as a Teaching Artist in public schools.

Sarah grew up dancing with the University of Utah's Virginia Tanner Creative Dance Studio. She holds an MFA in Dance from Mills College with an emphasis in choreography and dance education and a BFA in Modern Dance from the University of Utah. She performed with the Chicago Moving Company 2002-2004 and as a guest artist with Repertory Dance Theatre in Salt Lake City, Utah. She also performed in the 2002 Winter Olympics Arts Festival. Sarah is thrilled to be part of Open Space and to share her love of movement with young dancers!
